

Members share their learning goals for 2023

Members share their learning goals for 2023

gy of North

u3a

members have shared the new things they want to learn in 2023.

Responding to a call out in the u3a national newsletter, huge amounts of u3a members shared the interests they wanted to pursue in the new year. Some members wanted to learn cerebral topics including pre-slavery history in Africa and the geology of North East Scotland, whilst others were interested in artistic pursuits such as how to draw and woodwork. Meditation, Spanish and how to repair electronics were other topics that members expressed an interest in exploring this year.

u3a enables members to learn together in an informal environment, in which members develop their interests and share their skills. If you'd like to learn something new this year, why not join us? Find your local u3a.

If you are a member and have skills to share, please come forward - either nationally by emailing learning@u3a.org.uk or within your own u3a.

If you do get a new group going this year, please let us know by emailing communications@u3a.org.uk