

u3a "rock star" talks world on adventures on u3a radio playlist

u3a "rock star" talks world on adventures on u3a radio playlist

Geologist Martin from Sutton u3a talks about his career, travel and what it's like to eat a goat's head

The Geologist Martin Eames has given an exclusive interview with the u3a radio podcast this month and talks about his adventures travelling the world, Martin from Sutton u3a, who was educated at Emmanuel College Cambridge then researched for a doctorate and lectured at Glasgow University – has worked for companies around the world – and lived in North Africa and the Middle East.

He tells Ela Watts from the radio podcast about his travels including the most interesting meal he ate in Central Asia – a goats head!

Hear this and more on the latest u3a radio podcast – out now - and you can also catch all previous episodes of the podcast on our YouTube channel.

Martin will be leading a free u3a event on Sedimentary Rocks on Nov 2. Find out more on our online events page.